DISTINGUISHED MEN ON FIELD

Former Secretary of the Navy, Thaw Jurist and United States Senator Visit the Battlefield. Several Tours here on Sunday.

Sunday was a typical tourist day in Gettysburg with several tours, a number of automobile parties, and an excursion load of sight-seers here for the day.

An automobile party of more than usual prominence visited Gettysburg over Sunday, arriving here Saturday afternoon. They included William E. Chandler, Secretary of the Navy under President Chester A. Arthur; Henry F. Hollis, United States Senator from New Hampshire; and Judge Edgar Aldrich, of Littleton, New Hampshire, former member and speaker of the House of Representatives of that state and, since 1891, United States district judge in the District of New Hampshire. Judge Aldrich made several of the recent important decisions regarding the case of Harry Thaw, whose pleas have come under his jurisdiction. Mr. and Mrs. Irving W. Drew, of Lancaster, N. H., were also with the party who registered at the Eagle Hotel.

Saturday evening a party of seventy five master plumbers, en route to the State convention at York, arrived here from Philadelphia. They registered at the Eagle Hotel and spent Sunday on the battlefield, leaving this morning for York. All were most enthusiastic over their tour of the field and one of them in discussing their trip to Gettysburg said, "Surely the people of Pennsylvania do not know what a wonderful spot the State possesses. If they did, more would come here." While here the party registered at the Eagle Hotel.

J. R. Mitchell, of New York City; Percival Rosseau, of Paris; W. G. Huntley, of Virginia; and G. Dan Morgan, of Durham, North Carolina, composed an automobile party that spent Sunday here, registering at Hotel Gettysburg. Others registered at the Gettysburg were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carpenter and Mrs. Charlotte Harrison, of Washington, D. C.; and Edgar Whitmore and Edgar R. Whitmore, also of Washington.

The Philadelphia and Reading brought in a Pennsylvania Railroad excursion from Newark, New Jersey, and vicinity, with 282 persons. The regular trains brought more than their usual number.

The De Lancey School boys returned home Sunday evening after two happy days in Gettysburg. They had a big time of it, some of them choosing horseback rather than tourist wagons to see the field and the youngsters were given free rein to enjoy themselves.

Automobiles were everywhere to be seen on the battlefield and that the season was on in earnest was very apparent. The hackmen had ample work on hand and the avenues were very busy places.

DOUBLE DUTY

Uses Lake Bed as Potato Patch in Summer.

L. M. Gardner Jr., of York Springs, has drained Meadowhill Lake near that town and will plant a crop of potatoes in the bed of the lake which has a rich deep soil washed in from the surrounding hillsides. If a dry, hot summer comes along Mr. Gardner will irrigate the potatoes and will be sure of a good crop. By a system of ditches he has averted all danger from a freshet or thunderstorm that would flood his crop. Mr. Gardner receives a nice sum for the ice cut from the lake in winter and now he will have a double income from the same spot of ground.

HOME DESTROYED IN SUNDAY FIRE

Home of D. B. Gouker, Near Barlow, Totally Destroyed with Nearly All the Contents. Blame Chimney Spark for the Blaze.

Fire completely destroyed the two story frame dwelling house of D. B. Gouker, along the Taneytown Road, Sunday afternoon between four and five o'clock. With the building there burned the summer kitchen and the contents of the second story of the dwelling.

The fire was first discovered by Mr. Gouker, who had started toward the barn and noticed smoke issuing from near the chimney at the roof. He hurried back and asked his daughters whether they had built a large fire in the range but they had only a very small fire there and when they hurried to the upper portion of the building they discovered the entire attic in flames.

So rapidly did the fire spread, fanned by the stiff wind, that they were unable to save any clothing or furniture on the second story and the best that could be done was to get out the household furnishings from the first floor.

Neighbors gathered at the scene and devoted their energies to saving nearby buildings. The meat was taken out of the smoke house and the building rolled to a safe place. Water was poured in quantities on the wagon shed and all the other buildings were saved.

Mrs. Gouker and a daughter were in Gettysburg and hurried home when notified of the disaster but, when they arrived there, the fire was practically over. The farm is located about a half mile from Barlow.

It is thought that the fire started from a spark from the chimney. Mr. Gouker carried light insurance in the Adams County Mutual Company. The family is being cared for by neighbors while the furniture saved was taken to the home of Harry Dougherty nearby.

HEAVY TASK FOR POST OFFICE MEN

Gettysburg Post Office Force Finds itself Suddenly Confronted with Heavy Task which will Require Six Weeks to Complete.

Gettysburg's post office force this morning were the busiest bunch of workmen to be found in the town, while the employees of Uncle Sam at other places in the county were up against the same proposition which caused the activity here. Persons waiting for their mail at boxes and general delivery became restless over the delay in distribution, and those receiving mail by carrier had to wait about an hour past the scheduled time for their arrival.

An order received from Washington prescribes an immense amount of extra work at every office in order to get important statistics and details regarding the parcel post service. To handle properly this extra work at the Gettysburg office would require the services of at least two extra clerks. So busy was the regular force this morning that it was impossible to attend to calls at the many windows and delay was reported on all sides.

Every parcel which enters the Gettysburg office must be examined to learn from what zone it was sent and what postage it contained. A memorandum must be made of this as well as the destination of every outgoing parcel and the postage it bears. All this information must be tabulated showing the amount of postage to and from each one of the eight zones. When it is considered that several hundred parcels are handled at the Gettysburg office every day a small idea of the extra work may be ascertained.

But that is a mere trifle when the other data required is taken into consideration. The local force must calculate the increase in the amount of fourth class mail since the parcel post was established, they must tell the number of parcels delivered on the rural routes, by city carriers, and by general delivery clerks at the office windows. They must report how many of the parcels collected on the rural delivery routes are for delivery in Gettysburg, and how many of them are for dispatch on outgoing mails.

In addition an estimate must be made of the cost of delivering each package, a process which will require careful estimate and the taking into account of much other data.

Reports of all these things must be made for each of the six weeks during a period starting to-day and, while the extra work is at its height just now when it has not been thoroughly systematized, delay may be expected during the entire period in the handling of mail.

BADLY INJURED

Charles Runk Wounded as Result of Hazing Affair.

The Chambersburg School Board will investigate and try to fix the blame for a rather vicious fight which occurred among some of the scholars, growing out of a hazing affair.

Last Monday some of the High School scholars seized Charles, son of the Hon. and Mrs. J. M. Runk, and cut off part of his mustache, the youths claiming that the mustache would not look well in the class picture, which will be taken soon of the Seniors. A combat ensued and in the melee Runk received a severe gash across the forehead, requiring five stitches to dress, and he also received a gash on the left forearm.

The Runk family is well known in Gettysburg.

HAS DEFICIT

Western Maryland, however, Spent Large Sum for Improvements.

For February the Western Maryland reported a deficit of $326,000 after deduction of operating expenses and taxes, against a credit balance of $96,000 in February a year ago. But in February, 1913, the management expended only $138,000 on maintenance of way, structures and equipment, while in the same month of 1914 expenditures for those purposes totaled $490,000.

FELL FROM AN UPPER WINDOW

Thurmont Woman, Aged Seventy Two Years, Gets out of Second Story Window and Falls to the Ground. Is Severely Shocked.

Mrs. Sarah Saylor, is critically ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John S. Weybright, Thurmont, largely as a result of a fall from a window of her bedroom in the second floor of her home. She is about 72 years of age.

Since 1902, after the death of her husband, Mrs. Saylor has been making her home most of the time with Mrs. Weybright. Her mental faculties have become impaired in the past year, and it was because of this condition that she got out of the window. It is said that her health has been good, her troubles being imaginary.

A close watch has been kept over her for some time past, and the day of the occurrence all the windows in her room, except one, were fastened. However, she climbed from the window when her daughter went for a minute to an adjoining room, where her son, Saylor has been quite sick with a touch of pneumonia and measles.

The distance Mrs. Saylor fell was about 14 feet. Several men on the street saw Mrs. Saylor getting out through the window, but before they could get within reach she fell, landing full length on her back on the ground. These gentlemen picked her up in a stunned condition and carried her into the house.

It is rather remarkable that Mrs. Saylor escaped serious injuries. She was scarcely bruised and no bones were broken. However, the shock to her system was very great and she is in a serious condition.

LUCKY FIND

Spring Grove Lad Picks up Bracelet Worth $2,500.

A platinum bracelet, set with 24 diamonds and valued at $2,500, lost by Mrs. Bruth Runk, of Baltimore, one of a coasting party while she was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Glatfelter last winter, was found Friday by Paul Freed, the 18-year-old son of Levi Freed, gardener for the Glatfelters. Sprouting blades of a tuft of alfalfa raised the bracelet several inches from the ground, making its discovery possible.

During the winter Mr. and Mrs. Glatfelter gave a coasting party on the hill north of their house and between it and the state road, Mrs. Runk, who was one of the coasters, dropped the bracelet from her arm. When the loss was discovered a thorough search was begun. The fields were raked in the effort made to find it. The hunt was continued even after the snow disappeared from the ground until the present time.

BUMPER PEACH CROP

South Mountain Orchards Expected to Smash Records.

According to present indications the coming peach crop in the South Mountain fruit belt will be the largest in 18 years. While many trees, and in some instances whole orchards, located in the lowlands were entirely frozen by the January blizzard, those in an altitude of 300 feet or more escaped with practically no loss, and unless a late freeze injures the buds, the more fortunately located growers expect a bumper crop.

Lancelot Jacques, of Smithsburg, an extensive grower, states that the present outlook in the fruit region in Smithsburg district is the most promising in many years, and that many peach growers are counting on making up some of the losses of previous years.

All of the small fruit, including cherries, apricots, plums, raspberries and strawberries, appear to have withstood the extremely cold weather without material injury.

TOOK EXAMINATION

Candidates for County Post Offices Take Mental Tests.

An examination was held in Gettysburg Saturday for postmasters in the county at the Fourth Class offices.

The examination was ordered by the department, which has ruled that post-offices paying more than $180 a year must be in charge of men who have passed civil service examinations.

Examination was held here for all such offices in Adams County except those at Abbottstown and McSherrytown, which were held at Hanover. The present postmasters all took the examinations with the exception of at Fairfield, Idaville and York Springs. There were twenty entrants, three of whom were women.

FEW GOWNS AND SUITS BUT SHOW THE V-SHAPED NECK

No doubt the V-shaped opening at the throat is most becoming, but it is quite interesting to note how universal it is this season for all sorts of gowns and suits; the tailored suit shows a vest cut V-shaped; the little tailored dresses, the dance frocks and the dinner gowns, almost without exception, have the same arrangement at the throat. It may be a trifle lower or higher, and that is the only difference.

Whereas the trained dress is not as much worn as it was several seasons ago, there are occasions that really demand such a gown. No. 8277 shows a charming combination of plain and brocade turquoise blue charmeuse, with the neck softly filled in with net.

GEN. HUERTA REFUSES TO SALUTE FLAG

Wilson Asks Con- gress For Power.

WAR SEEMS CERTAIN

More Warships Go South to Join Fleet.

DICTATOR RAISED NEW ISSUE

Wanted Promise in Writing Sa- lute Would be Returned.

Washington, April 20.—Huerta has defied the United States and refused to order a salute of apology to the American flag. That is his answer to President Wilson's ultimatum.

The president will appear before a joint session of congress this afternoon and ask for authority to use the army and navy to enforce the demands of the United States.

This request will be granted immediately and orders will be issued for the blockading and seizure of all the Mexican ports on the east and west coasts of the southern republic.

This movement, while not in itself an act of war, is almost certain to involve hostilities, and officials in Washington had accepted as inevitable an open declaration of war with Mexico.

The news of Huerta's refusal was flashed by wireless to Admiral Badger, commanding the Atlantic fleet, now hurrying toward Mexico, and to the commanders of the American war vessels already in Mexican waters. They will not, however, make any definite move against Mexico until congress has acted. With the passage of the joint resolution by the legislative branch, orders will go forth for immediate action.

The ports of Tampico and Vera Cruz will be the first to be seized. Railroad communication to Mexico City will be interrupted, and an effort will be made to starve Huerta into submission through cutting off his customs receipts and his supplies of ammunition. Huerta's defiance came after a day of haggling by him. It came after President Wilson had again served notice in the most emphatic terms that his demand for a salute was unconditional. The exact words of the message which the president sent to Secretary Bryan from White Sulphur Springs and which ended all hope on the part of Huerta for a modification of this government's ultimatum were these:

"Tell O'Shaughnessy our terms are unconditional in every detail."

"WOODROW WILSON."

The vigorous telegram from the president was caused by an eleven hour demand on the part of Huerta that the United States through Charge O'Shaughnessy in Mexico City should enter into a formal protocol giving him assurances that this government would fire a return salute to the Mexican salute of apology.

President Wilson informed Huerta that the United States would not give him a single assurance beyond the statement contained in Admiral Mayo's original demand on the Mexican general, which stipulated that an American war vessel would return the Mexican salute.

While these exchanges were going on by cable between Washington and Mexico City, the navy department was centering its attention on further preparations for any eventuality that might occur.

Shortly after Huerta's latest dilatory message had been received, orders were sent to the battleship Mississippi, with an aeroplane corps and 600 marines and the torpedo flotilla at Pensacola, Fla., to get under way at once, joining Admiral Badger's fleet as it entered the Gulf of Mexico and proceeding with the fleet to Tampico.

It became known that the messages showed that Huerta was not raising any objection to the salute itself, but as to the details under which the salute would be returned. The main condition was that the United States agrees in writing that the salute be fired, instead of relying on the assurance given by Admiral Mayo for a return salute.

This was construed by officials as a wily and adroit move on the part of Huerta to obtain an assurance direct from the American government which would be capable of being construed by him as a recognition of the de facto Mexican government.

There was no disposition on the part of the officials here to give any such assurances, or to prolong the discussion as to details. They were determined, after consulting with President Wilson, to hold to the one concrete question of Huerta's yielding to the American demand as it had first been submitted. The reply to Huerta made clear to him that a "yes" or "no" to the American demand was all that remained for him, and that nothing that was to be done would bear the construction of a recognition of the Huerta regime.

The president's ultimatum to Huerta expired at 7.40 o'clock, Washington time, but it was not until almost 8.30 o'clock, Washington time, that the important messages from O'Shaughnessy began to tick in over the state department wire. A special direct wire to Mexico City had been set up for more than two hours and all the officials of the department had been anxiously awaiting the first sound of the receiver.

Secretary Tumulty hurried from the White House over to the state department and Secretary of the Navy Daniels joined him at the operating room of the state department. An expert from the department translated the cipher message line by line.

O'Shaughnessy began by telling of an interview that he had at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Mexican time, with the Mexican minister of foreign affairs. The suspense of those who were waiting was great as they followed line by line the translated dispatch without any indication of what the final answer was to be.

After about half an hour of this reading of the O'Shaughnessy dispatch piecemeal, a point was reached where the American charge said that his conference with the foreign minister lasted until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Mexican time, and that Minister Portillo had informed him that Huerta had not yet acceded to the American demands. This left only an hour in which Huerta had to answer the president's ultimatum.

Secretary Daniels and Mr. Tumulty had hardly recovered from their disappointment when another message from O'Shaughnessy began to come in over the wire. This was O'Shaughnessy's report on Huerta's final answer.

The secretary of the navy and Mr. Tumulty looked very serious as they emerged from the office of the secretary of state with the report of Mr. O'Shaughnessy with them. It was apparent that they had received bad news, but they declined to make any statement until the next of the message had been laid before Secretary Bryan, who was at his home.

The cabinet officer and Mr. Tumulty hurried to a White House automobile and the driver started full speed toward Secretary Bryan's home.

When Secretary Daniels and Mr. Tumulty arrived at the Bryan home a long distance telephone wire had been set up direct to the president's room at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. The O'Shaughnessy dispatch was read to the president, and he immediately declared that the incident was closed. He instructed Mr. Tumulty to call a special meeting of the cabinet and to make arrangements for a joint session of congress.

TELLS OF PLEA FOR BABY'S LIFE

Girl-Mother Begged All Night to Save Infant.

RICH MAN'S SON ACCUSED

Says She Unwillingly Consented to Murder of Child After Its Father Threatened to Abandon Her.

Spartanburg, S. C., April 20.—Accused of the murder of a two-months-old baby, said to have been his daughter, whom he is alleged to have thrown from a bridge over Lawson's Fork creek, Clyde Caldwell Clement, until recently a student in the preparatory department of Wofford college, will be tried in the court of general sessions, which convened here today.

Miss Laura Fleda Pendleton, a telegraph operator, confessed mother of the child, will be tried with him as an accessory.

Clement, twenty-three years old, is the son of Robert C. Clement, a merchant and planter, of Sandy Springs, N. C. Miss Pendleton, nineteen years old, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Pendleton, of Durham, N. C.

According to a confession made by Miss Pendleton to Solicitor Albert E. Hill shortly after her arrest, she unwillingly consented to the destruction of the child, but only after Clement had threatened to abandon her if she refused to do his bidding. She said she was in the room with Clement when the baby was thrown. She said, weeping and pleading with Clement for the life of the baby.

She had previously failed, she declared, in an effort to induce Mrs. Mary E. Bebout, matron of the Salvation Army Rescue Home at Greenville, S. C., to adopt the girl.

Clement, through his attorneys, has denied the charge and has expressed confidence that he will be able to convince not only the jury, but the general public of his innocence.

Interest in the case has been increased by the statement of Samuel J. Nichols, of counsel for Clement, that "the probabilities are that men higher up might be involved."

Notwithstanding the intimation of Clement's attorneys that they will attack the reputation of Miss Pendleton and will try to shift the entire burden of the crime upon her, the girl is said to be still infatuated with the youth.

Even after she had made her incriminating statement against him, she begged to see him, and when Clement was brought to her cell in the county jail she clasped his hands through the bars, stroked them and murmured expressions of endearment and devotion.

In Clement's presence she repented, at the request of Solicitor Hill, the essential parts of her confession. "He will not deny it!" she exclaimed, when the prosecuting attorney, in questioning her, spoke as if he doubted her story of Clement's part in the crime. Clement remained silent.

Robert C. Clement, who is reported to be willing to spend his fortune if it will save his son, has engaged four of the best known criminal lawyers in the Carolinas.

Miss Pendleton was without counsel at first. Much sympathy was aroused for her, however, and Colonel B. G. Landrum, of Governor Blease's staff; Mayor John P. Floyd, of Spartanburg, and others raised a fund with which a noted lawyer of Greenville was retained for the girl.

WEDS HIS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

Smyrna, Del., April 20.—An unusual wedding ceremony was performed when Joseph C. Robinson, a retired farmer, fifty-seven years old, was married to his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Bessie M. Robinson, thirty-three years of age.

Rev. E. H. Collins performed the ceremony and two grown up sons of the bridegroom, Joseph and Ralph, and the year-old child of the bride, sitting in a high chair, witnessed the wedding ceremony.

The bridegroom has half a dozen grown children and the bride has five, ranging in age from one to eleven years. Her husband, Frank Robinson, died less than a year ago, and the wife of the bridegroom died on Dec. 17.

New York, April 20.—Frederick Dabbs, a sailor of the battleship Wyoming, who appeared before Magistrate Deuel, charged with being in a row, is free on a suspended sentence. COLLEGE CLASSES PLEAD FOR HAZERS 54 Suspended and 18 Put on Probation at Lafayette.

Easton, Pa., April 20.—Meetings were held by all the classes of Lafayette college to consider a faculty order suspending fifty-four sophomores and putting eighteen more on probation for a wholesale hazing, which is prohibited by college rules.

It is charged that the sophomores took a lot of freshmen up the North Delaware river road on the night of April 10 and made them run a gauntlet, clubbing them with heavy sticks.

For a time it looked as though the entire student body would voice a protest by going on strike, but calmer counsel prevailed. The classes met singly and then in a body and finally drafted a set of resolutions which were presented to President E. D. Warfield.

The resolutions requested that the suspended men be reinstated and contained a promise that hazing would not be sanctioned by any of the college classes in the future. More than 500 students that attended the mass meeting signed the resolutions.

Dr. Warfield received the students personally and appeared pleased with the tone of the resolutions. He promised to call a meeting of the faculty in the near future, when he said he would do all he could for the suspended men.

RUN FOR TRAIN KILLS HIM

Middle-Aged Man Ruptures a Blood Vessel to Get There.

Altoona, Pa., April 20.—Running to catch a train resulted in the death of Elmer Harris, aged forty years, of Roaring Springs.

Harris was employed at the Brooks mills, several miles from his home, and failed to give himself sufficient time to reach the station ahead of the train. He started to run and tripped over a pile of stones in the road, rupturing a blood vessel in the intestines. Doctors tried to save his life with an operation, but he died several hours later.

D. A. R. MEET IN WASHINGTON

The 23d Annual Convention Opened Today.

PROGRAM FOR THE WEEK

Vice President Marshall Will Greet Delegates This Afternoon and President and Mrs. Wilson Will Receive Them on Wednesday.

Washington, April 26.—The twenty third annual convention of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution was called to order this morning in Memorial Continental hall, by Mrs. William Cummings Story, president general of the society. About 1600 delegates are in attendance.

This evening the principal social
feature of the congress will take place when Mrs. Story will hold her reception.

On Wednesday afternoon President and Mrs. Wilson will receive the delegates at the White House. Vice President Marshall will greet the delegates in his stead this afternoon. Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Senator John D.
Works, of California; Rogers Clark B.
Thurston, president of the Sons of the American Revolution, and John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union, are also expected to make addresses.

While the principal business before the congress will be the election of ten vice presidents general, the chief interest will be the selection of local officers.

Another question which is receiving
much attention is the army canteen.
At the last session a resolution was passed proposing the restoration of the canteen. Many members contend this resolution was not given proper consideration by the members, and at effort will be made by the Anti-Saloon League to have it rescinded.

Tomorrow evening special services will be held at Memorial Continental hall to honor the memory of Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson and Mrs. Charles W.
Fairbanks, former presidents general
who have died during the year.

The election will take place Thursday, and voting will be done with machines.

Thursday evening the Daughters
will assemble at the banquet hall
in the New Willard hotel and present their gifts to the general order.

Friday afternoon Mayor James H.
Preston, of Baltimore, and former Governor Edwin Warfield, of Maryland will speak upon the plans for the Star Spangled Banner Centennial Convention,
which will be held in Baltimore Sept. 9 to 13. The convention will endure Saturday, which day will be devoted to the completion of routine business.

OUTRUNS HORSE THIEVES

Looted Dealer, in Taxi, Overtakes the Men, Who Give Up.

Allentown, Pa., April 26.—After a two-day search by auto, Frank Person, an Allentown horse dealer, found two horse thieves who had made away
with five horses and a mule.

Person had purchased the animals in Philadelphia and hired Charles Mc-Gill and Joseph Burns to bring them to Allentown.

They should have arrived in Allentown on Wednesday, and when they failed to show up Person adopted the novel method of chasing horse thieves by hiring a taxi. He found that they had sold the animals to a hotelkeeper near Rocky Ridge for $137, getting two plugs to boot. The horses were in a cow stable and the mule was at work in a field.

Person hurried to Line Lexington
where he came upon the thieves and thrust them. He then hurried to Doylestown and engaged a constable with whose help he recovered the stolen animals from the man who had bought them.

The thieves returned to Person $78
which they had left of the money they received from the hotel man.

TREE HELD COW CAPTIVE

Caught With Head In Trunk and Is Nearly Reduced to Skeleton.

Uniontown, Pa., April 26.—Held for fourteen days with her head fastened in a hole in the trunk of a tree, a cow belonging to William Green, of Addison, was rescued, but was so near reduced to a skeleton that veterinary attention was of no avail.

On March 31 this cow disappeared and was missing until April 13, when it was located by a shepherd dog which led the farmer to a wood on an adjointing farm. There he found the cow standing with her head in the hole of an old decayed tree.

Both Fall In Deadly Duel.
Indiana, Pa., April 26.—Frank Bar-cuto was killed and Vite Palmere was desperately wounded in a fight at Palmere's home at Aultman, near here.
The men quarreled and, running into the street, fired at each other until both fell.

Dogs Belong In Meat Class.
Kalamazoo, Mich., April 26.—If we only thought so, dog flesh would be finely flavored and excellent meat, according to James J. Walsh, of Ford ham university. Prejudice was the cause of the dogs being kept out of the meat class, he said.

ROB SAFE, GET $1000; WARNING FAILS

Cracksmen's Boldness Dis- armed Suspicion.

Philadelphia, April 26.—Four crack-men entered the butcher shop of Clarence O. Franklin, 1721 Ridge avenue and opened a large steel safe containing nearly $1000, with a crowbar and a small hand drill.

The men made no effort to keep quiet, but kept up a continuous conversation, which was heard by a neighbor. As they were leaving the store by the back window one of the men told his trousers.

Mrs. Bessie Kee, of 1733 Cambridge street, whose window commands a view of the back door of the store,
was awakened by the barking of her dog.

A "picking" sound, as she described it, and the screech of rasping metal caused her to look out on the alley, where she saw a man leaning against the rear gate of the Franklin store.

He was talking to the men inside and seemed to think that there was nothing to conceal.

The woman tried to call the police
on the phone, but the operator told her that they were busy, so she decided to let it go till morning, when she notified Mr. Franklin.

The cracksmen gained entrance to the store by jimmying a shutter and tearing off the screen on the back window. They drilled the safe till the lock was exposed and forced it back with the jimmy. Everything was left in perfect order, but a small piece of nitroglycerine, soaked in sawdust,
such as is used in the Maine lumber camps, which was left behind, showed that the men had come prepared to use "soup," as the explosive is known professionally.

BATHING IN SURF

Fully a Score Ventured Into Breakers
at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J., April 26.—Fully
a score of bathers ventured into the surf yesterday, despite a decided tang in the breezes blowing in from the sea, and the majority of them seemed to thoroughly enjoy the experience.

The weather was ideal throughout the entire day, and the great weekend throng filled the Boardwalk. A few of the smaller bathing establishments are preparing to open for the season, provided the present brand of deather continues.

Helen Cudahy Quits as Nurse.
Boston, April 26.—Miss Helen Cudahy, daughter of the Chicago packer, who came from the west to learn nursing at the Massachusetts General hospital, has decided not to stay. Her reason is given in her own words: "I thought training in a hospital meant taking care of patients. I find it is three-fourths housework and drudgery."

Lands Sturgeon Worth $138.
Salem, N. J., April 26.—George B.
Purtell, of Pennsville, landed a sturgeon that measured nine feet eight inches in length, from which he took 87½ pounds of roe. David Shourds was the purchaser and he paid Purtell $138.12 for his prize.

Big League Stories

By CHARLES E. VAN LOAN

VI.—M'CLUSKEY'S PROD- : : : IGAL : : : :

From "The Ten Thousand Dollar Arm
and Other Tales of the Big League"
Copyright, 1912, by Small, Maynard & Company

MIKE M'CLUSKEY might have known something was wrong with Rick Keene when that high salaried artist asked for an advance on his first month's pay.
It was nothing new for a bush league recruit to join in the spring a financial ruin, but for a thousand dollar a month man—well, McCluskey should have been warned, and after that he might have kept his eyes open. And Keene's expose was the very Methusalem of all excesses.

"I guess I've lost my check book, Mike," said Keene. "Can I tap you for a couple of hundred?"

"A couple of hundred?" howled Mc-Cluskey. "If I had that much money
do you think I'd speak to you? Dog, gone if I believe I'd speak to myself!"

Then, as he saw the look of real disappointment in the face of the pitcher,
he hastened to add: "I was only kidding, Rick. Will a couple of hundred be enough? I'll get it for you tonight."

For a man who could think as fast as McCluskey when directing his campaigners from the bench Mike was singularly thick about other things. He never looked beneath the surface, and when he had formed his opinion of a man's character nothing short of an earthquake would budge him. McCluskey had known Keene for six years;
he had always been steady and reliable, hence, by Mike's reasoning, he would always be so.

If Mike had been the man to notice
little things off the diamond as well as on it he would have seen that Rick's ring and pin were missing.

Keene was a fixed star in the baseball firmament. For three years he had led the Nonpareils pitchers in the winning column, and whenever the "old leg wagon" went into the box the home rosters sat back, unloosed their belts and cursed their gloomy predictions of defeat. The same feeling extended to the team.

If McCluskey was blind there were other eyes on the team. Tim Finch, the bullet headed little second baseman, observed the absence of the outward signs of prosperity.

"I see Rick blew in without the ice," Finch remarked the next afternoon as the ball players were removing their soggy flannels and roasting
for the services of the overworked rubber.

"If it had been Burchard here, with his dope sheets and his method of beating the races, I'd say that the ponies on some winter track had been snatching the old boy."

Peg Foster, the mainstay catcher of the club, also had his eye on the star

pitcher was the same thing which has driven so many brilliant performers out of the big leagues and back to the bushes. In Rick's peculiar case it was a brown quart bottle with a red and yellow label on the side.

During the winter the habit gained strength. Lacking the check of training and hard exercise, Keene hid himself in a small southern town and gave himself up to self indulgence.

Keene hoped that with the beginning of the spring training the appetite would desert him and he'd set himself
about the annual task of "unlimbering the old soup bone." The arm was as strong as ever, but the steadiness and the control which made him a great pitcher were missing, and nobody knew it better than Keene himself.

Rick believed that when the strain of a game was put upon him he would find his old control. It was because of this that he asked McCluskey to let him pitch one of the first games against the colt team. He was driven from the box in the third inning.

"Little wild today, old horse," said Peg. "Little wild. You'll be all right in a few days."

Rick did not answer, but gloomily slipped on his blanket coat and trudged toward the dressing room. That evening he did not join in the usual
"fanning bee," which is an institution of the training camp. Ball players, like all other performers, talk shop at every opportunity.

The Nonpareils opened the season against their old enemies, the Gamecocks. McCluskey, anxious to win the opening game, watched his old pitchers
as they warmed up and selected Fargo.
The crowd had been yelling for Keene.
They yelled still louder in the fifth inning, when Fargo gave two bases on balls, and Rick, on the bench found himself wondering what they would say to him if he went into the box
without the control which had enabled him to win from the Gamecocks the last seven times he had faced them.

Fargo won his game by virtue of a heavy bombardment in the eighth inning, and the Nonpareils trotted to the clubhouse with an inaugural victory to their credit.

That night, aided by the bottle,
Keene decided to call for a showdown.
"If I can get out there and beat a club or two," he thought to himself,
"I'll get over this nervousness."

The next day he asked McCluskey to send him into the box, and in warning up he showed remarkable speed
and his old time control.

The roar which greeted Keene when he entered the diamond went to Keene's nerves like a tonic, and when the first ball shot twisting over the inside corner of the plate and the unhappy right hand went into the air the entire Nonpareil infield began to bark:

"The old boy's there!"

"Git at 'em, Rick!"

It was this sudden yelling behind Keene which informed the big pitcher that his teammates had not been sure of him. They were encouraging him just as they encouraged Delaney and the other doubtful ones. It was a shock to Keene's professional pride.
He set his jaw at a fighting angle and began to find the corners of the plate
with his curve ball, and for six innings
he made the Gamecocks wear a path
from the visitors' bench to the plate and back again. He would show 'em that there was nothing the matter with him.

In the seventh inning Rick began by missing the plate with his first ball.
He followed with two more curves which went wide; tried a fast ball and just grazed the batter's shoulder.

The Gamecock coaches whooped de-rively as their man jogged down to first base.

"You know what they said about this fellow?" they shouted. "No control!
Goin' to be a bad year, Rick, a b-a-d year!"

"Make those fellows shut up!"
Keene growled to the umpire, whereupon the coaches, seeing that they had hit the mark, redoubled their efforts.

Keene waited as long as he dared in the hope of steadying himself and then flashed Foster the sign for a straight, fast ball. Peg nodded and dropped into position.

Rick put all his speed on the ball and let it fly like a bullet. He knew when the ball left his hand that he was taking a gambling chance on getting it over the plate, but Hennessey,
the batter, stood still until it was too late.

Hennessey was an old timer. He had battled against Keene for several seasons. Very few pitchers ever hit a batter purposely and then usually with a curve ball, and Keene's control was so well known that batters stood up to the plate without fear of him. This was Hennessey's undoing. Rick saw him drop his bat and dodge, but the ball caught him on the side of the head, and Hennessey went down like a log.

It was two minutes before he recovered consciousness, two minutes of agony for Keene. This finished the last shred of Rick's nerve.

When the game began again Keene walked the next man with four balls
in succession and had thrown two

wide ones to the next batter before McCluskey sent Delaney running to the rescue.

The benchers received the blow in wondering silence. Rick Keene taken out of the box for wildness!

"Pretty tough luck," said one of the younger pitchers. "You had a no hit game going too."

Keene did not answer. "If you hadn't hit that fellow you'd have been all right. But I had to do it, Rick."

Keene slipped along the bench to the water bucket, took a big drink of cold water and squared his shoulders.

"Mac," said he, "the next time I get at these fellows I'll be right on!"

He left the sentence unfinished and started for the clubhouse. Before he reached the gate the Gamecocks had completed their work of annihilation, and Keene's three presents had turned into runs at the plate.

Next morning Keene did not appear at breakfast, and McCluskey, who lived at the same hotel, went up to Keene's room. Rick's bed had not been disturbed, and all his belongings had disappeared from the room. An envelope lay on the dresser. It was addressed to McCluskey, and the manager ripped it open with nervous fingers. There was little enough of it:

Dear Mac—I've got to go away for a while. If there is anything coming me take it in part payment of that two hundred.

R. KEENE

McCluskey dropped the sheet of paper with a low whistle of amazement.
Then he picked it up again and spelled out each word. It would not have surprised him more to have received such a communication from his wife.

Rick Keene gone? Where? What for?
It was unbelievable. McCluskey hurried down to the desk.

"Where's Keene?" he asked.

"His key's gone," said the clerk.

"Isn't he in his room?"

"His key was in the door," said Mc-Cluskey. "Where's his trunk?"

Some of the players, lounging about the lobby and reading the morning papers, gathered around the manager.

"Rick's gone," said McCluskey.

"Gone," said Fitzpatrick. "Mike, you're crazy!"

McCluskey produced the note. At the same time the hotel porter arrived with the information that at 7 o'clock
the night before Keene had asked that his trunk be taken to the storage room.
To be left there until called for. The man who had taken the trunk was exhaustively cross examined.

"There was nothing strange about his manner that I seen, sir," ran his testimony. "He's always quiet like. No, sir, he didn't say anything else besides telling me to put his trunk in the storage room."

No one had seen Keene leave the hotel.

The afternoon papers "played the story" on the front pages. Some brilliant imaginations were loosed upon the disappearance of the star pitcher.
The city boiled with excitement, for a great baseball player is almost as great a personage as a president and twice as popular.

For a week the papers were full of the Keene case, and then it gradually died away into the paragraphs headed,
"Notes of the Diamond." The affair remained as much of a mystery as ever, and among the players from one end of the league to the other there was but one topic of conversation.

The Nonpareils, upset by their bereavement, fell into a slump and were forced to fight hard to win games from teams which held permanent leases on second division positions.

"I don't know what this country's coming to," said Mr. Obadiah J. Hoskins, agriculturist. "Ten years ago a man could hire all the hands he wanted at $30 a month and vitels. Now you can't get a man for love nor money.
They all want to live in the towns and starve."

Mr. Hoskins resided five miles from Centerville, which is ninety miles from anywhere and 900 miles from somewhere.

"Father," said Mrs. Hoskins, "there's a man coming in the front gate. We don't want to subscribe to nothing!"

A tall young man walked up to the porch and lifted his hat. He wore a neat brown suit of a pattern and style
strange to Centerville and environs.

"I heard you wanted to hire a man,"
said the stranger.

"You're hearin' good," said Obadi-
ah. "Have you got the man with you?"

"Yes," said the stranger.

"You?" said Obadiah. "Git out!"

"I want work," said the stranger.

"I don't care what it is, and it can't be too hard to suit me. The harder it is the better I'll like it."

"You're a city chap, ain't you?"
asked Obadiah.

"I was raised in the country," said
the man. "I know the difference between a horse and cow, if that's what you mean. It won't cost you a cent to try me out. If I don't make good you won't have to ask waivers on me."

"Hey!" said Obadiah. "What's that?"

"No work, no pay," said the young man. "How's that?"

"It sounds all right," said Obadiah cautiously. "Where'd you come from?"

"East," said the young man.

"What for?"

"For a change."

"Um-m-m!" said Obadiah. "You look healthy, all right."

Obadiah retired into the house, where he held a whispered conversation with his wife.

"Something's wrong with him, mother," he said. "He ain't no farm hand.
Like's not he don't mean any good."
"He looks honest enough," said Mrs.
Hoskins. "Anyway, there ain't a thing
he can steal. Give him a chance."

Obadiah came out and moved down
the steps.

"Show me your hands," he said.

The young man spread a pair of broad brown palms palm upward for inspection.

"Um-m-m!" said Obadiah, touching the cushions with his forefinger. "I was mistook. You have worked some-lately, ain't you? What's your name?"

"Brown," said the stranger—"Henry W. Brown."

Obadiah thought a moment.

"All right," said he at last. "When do you want to begin?"

"Now," said the stranger.

"In them clothes?" asked Obadiah suspiciously.

"They're all I've got with me," said Henry W. Brown. "I left my suit case at Centerville, but I haven't any working clothes in that—nothing but shirts and things."

"Um-m-m!" said Obadiah. "I'll git mother to fix you up some of my old overalls and a shirt. There's a right good room in the barn. You won't mind sleepin' there?"

"Not at all," said Brown.

"Hold on!" said Obadiah sharply.

"You ain't asked me how much I'll pay."

"I don't care," said Brown shortly.

Then he went toward the barn.

"I can't make him out," said Obadiah to his wife. "Did you hear what he said about wages?"

"Kind of loney maybe," said Mrs.
Hoskins charitably. "I'll hurry up and git him them things. It would be a shame to spoil that nice suit."

The new hired man put in a busy afternoon. There was a great deal of work to be done, and Obadiah wondered at the peaceful ease with which the "city feller" swung through his tasks.

"He's as strong as an ox," said he admirably to his wife. "Look right at him, he don't make him out, neither?"

The hired man had been sitting on the back steps looking at the sunset.
Obadiah had to call him twice before
he raised his head.

Henry W. Brown ate his way into the good graces of Mrs. Hoskins at once. He could have found no surer road to that kind and motherly heart.

The hired man sat on the edge of his bed and stared at the lithographs on the wall.

"It's a finish fight," said he between his teeth. "Either I'm going to beat it
this time or I'll lick me."

He had expected a restless night, but twenty minutes after he blew out his candle the hired man was snoring. The afternoon's work had not been without its effort. In an inconceivably short time Obadiah was pounding at the door.

"Break fast!" he said.

The hired man sat up, rubbed his eyes and stared at him.

"I slept like a log," he said to himself. There was a tone of surprise in his voice.

That was the first round of the fight
to a finish.

Obadiah was still wondering at the end of two weeks.

"Sometimes," said he, "he acts as if he was possessed. I never see a man work so hard in my life. He wears me out finding things for him to do. I told him today he'd better let up and take it easy. What do you think he said?"

He turned on me like a flash and kind of spit it out like he was mad. I want to work hard," he says. "That's my only chance! What do you think of that? You s'pose he got into trouble before he come here?"

"He's got something

Medical Advertising Feeble Old People

Are Told How to Regain Strength and Vigor.

As one grows old the waste of the system becomes more rapid than repair, the organs act more slowly and less effectively than in youth, the circulation is poor, the blood thin and digestion weak.

Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil is the ideal strengthener and body-builder for old folks, for it contains the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissues and replace weakness with strength. Vinol also fortifies the system against colds and thus prevents pneumonia.

Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people, I am sure you would be unable to supply the demand. I never took anything before that did me so much good as Vinol. It is the finest tonic and strengthener I ever used in my life."

If Vinol fails to build up the feeble, old people, and create strength we will return your money. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

P. S.—Our Saxo Salve stops itching and begins healing at once.

Banish Those Gray Hairs

Have Beautiful, Lustrous Hair, and Keep Looking Young.

Don't worry any longer. Gettysburg druggists now have a famous old French hair recipe that costs very little, but which is guaranteed to beautifully color gray or faded hair perfectly, evenly and without streaking.

Enthusiastic reports from druggists in other cities claim that users are delighted because it not only restores gray hair to its natural youthful color, but it removes every trace of dandruff in a week, stops scalp itch over night, and so quickly stimulates the hair roots that hair ceases to fall or thin out.

Get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Ask for LeMay's Cream of Sage and Quinine, and look young again. It is a harmless vegetable tonic—not a dye. Druggists everywhere are enthusiastic over this French recipe.

Appeal to Family Pride.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the heathen," announced the Rev. Dr. Fourtly at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men in the back seats who have been making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contribution." They are in duty and honor bound to help their brother heathens.

Medical Advertising. WOMEN'S WOES

Gettysburg Women Are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Keeping the kidneys well has spared thousands of women much misery. Read of a remedy for kidney's only that is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. Annie Flaherty, 311 Washington St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills during the past several years and am willing to tell of my experience for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. I had weak kidneys for a long time and was also subject to headaches and back-aches. Doan's Kidney Pills have removed all these troubles. There is no better remedy for the kidneys."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Witty Sentry.

A lieutenant of the United States Infantry recently met with a sad rebuff. The lieutenant was promenading in full uniform one day, and approached a volunteer on sentry, who challenged him with "Halt! who comes there?" The lieutenant, with contempt in every lineament of his face, expressed his feeling with an indignant "Ass!" The sentry's reply, apt and quick, came: "Advance, Ass, and give the countersign."

Advice.

Don't train exclusively with your own crowd. Give yourself a chance to grow wise by dwelling part of the time with afflicted people who do not think as you do. They will give you useful changes of thought, so that you won't get tired of yourself so soon.—Life.

Real Work Means Production.

Real work consists of producing something. No matter what it is, whether splitting fence posts or rolling barrels from the point where they are not wanted to the point where they are, its qualification lies in the fact that something is done for which mankind will be the better.

COOL, THEN WARM

Week Will Open with Showers and Lower Temperatures.

Frost as far south as Northern Alabama was promised for the beginning of the week by the weather bureau.

"The week will open," said the bulletin, "with showers and lower temperatures in the Atlantic states, and with generally fair and much colder weather in the lake region and the great central valleys, with freezing temperatures over the northern tier of states, and with frost as far down as the Texas panhandle, Oklahoma, northern Arkansas, Tennessee and possibly the extreme northern portions of Mississippi and Alabama."

"By Tuesday the cool weather will reach the middle Atlantic states and New England and fair weather will prevail for several days. The cool period will be short, and the higher temperatures over the west will extend rapidly eastward after Monday in advance of a northwest disturbance, reaching the Atlantic states by the middle of the week. The northwest disturbance will move eastward and southeastward, attended by showers over the northwest early in the week, reaching the plains states and the central portion of the country by the middle of the week, and probably New England and the Middle Atlantic States a day or so later."

MUST SWING OUT

Gettysburg Hotels will Have to Change their Main Doors.

Hundreds of doors on hotels throughout the State are being changed to open outward just as the doors in factories, theaters and amusement places have been rehung or rebuilt in the last few years. This change is being made by direction of inspectors from the State Department of Labor and Industry, who have been closely examining the means of egress at the hotels, taverns and similar places of public entertainment in the last year. Many of the Gettysburg hotels will have to change their doors as a result. The example set in theaters has been readily followed. The proposed rules for the government of moving picture theaters in the State will be completed during the coming week and will probably go into effect before many weeks go by.

Montana is not a great corn state in the general opinion and is not in the corn belt, and for this reason it is interesting to note that at the recent national corn show at Dallas, Tex., sweepstakes honors for corn were won by a Mr. Willard of Hardin, Mont., with first on best single ear of dent corn, first on best ten ears of dent corn, and first on ten best ears of dent corn.

The Kansas station is experimenting with some drought resisting corn that gives a good deal of promise. It is the result of a cross between what is known as Sherrod's White Dent and a Chinese variety and this crossed with the Mexican Hairy variety. Seed from this second union showed remarkable ability to resist dry weather at the college farm last season. The ear of the cross is of good size and of a dent type.

In Douglas county, Wash., the teaching of agriculture in the high school has been tackled in a very sensible manner. Last year an eighty acre farm adjoining the Waterville High school was leased for ninety-nine years. The boys study methods in the classroom and work them out in practice on the school farm. Each pupil has an acre, while more advanced students have supervision over ten acres.

With posts costing as much as they do, it is a good idea to treat them before putting them into the ground. One method is to char the butts to a point that will be five or six inches above the ground when set. Of the liquid preservatives creosote is one of the best. This should be applied to the posts (well dried) while hot with a brush, or the posts may be set into a tank containing the hot creosote. In the latter case the posts should be kept in the solution an hour or two.
